

Janice Ann Enright

In January 1997, Mr. Ickes and Ms. Enright formed The Ickes & Enright Group, a government relations and political strategy firm with strong and deep connections to both Washington, DC and New York. For nearly the past 20 years, it has leveraged its expertise and key relationships with those at the highest levels to advocate for its clients. For two decades they have continued the work they began while in public service, providing advice, planning, and legislative or Executive branch strategies to assist clients in identifying and meeting their goals and objectives in Washington, D.C. and New York City. Since 2003, when The Ickes & Enright Group affiliated with Peck, Madigan, Jones & Stewart, and subsequently formed the Tiber Creek Group, adding four additional operating firms and an office in New York City, Ms. Enright has been a key member of the management team, serving as the only woman owner and Board member.

The Ickes & Enright Group is drawing on nearly 50 years of combined experience in politics and law, is a strong Democratic brand strategically positioned to help its clients achieve their goals. The Ickes & Enright Group provides a broad range of services including:

- Consulting and Advocacy
- Government Relations
- Policy Analysis and Research

Ms. Enright and Harold Ickes have been working together since 1985, first at the New York law firm of Meyer, Suozzi, English & Klein, P.C., followed by the 1992 New York Democratic presidential primary campaign, the 1992 Democratic National Convention, and the 1992 Clinton/Gore White House transition team in Little Rock, Arkansas. Ms. Enright joined the White House in 1994 as Special Assistant to Harold Ickes, the Deputy Chief of Staff; she was responsible for the management of the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff. In that capacity, she was Mr. Ickes' primary liaison to senior White House officials, Cabinet members, agency staff, members of Congress and their senior staff, Democratic Party officials, interest groups and the press.

Ms. Enright earned her BS in Education from the State University of New York. In her work at the firm, she continues her focus on education, particularly in early learning and workforce development programs for the most vulnerable—hardworking underemployed, underpaid workers in America.
